Musilli gets state award

TROY — Ron Musilli, chairman of the Troy Development Council, has been chosen as the annual award winner of the "Volunteer of the Year Award" presented by the Ohio Economic Development Association. The award is presented at the Ohio Economic Development Association annual meeting in Columbus to individuals who have contributedto the creation and retention of jobs in their Ohio community, according to the OEDA. Musilli has served on the Board of Directors of the Troy Development Council for 12 years and has served as board chairman for four years.

"I was surprised and honored by the "Volunteer of the Year" award. My contribution to the Troy Development Council and the community is due to the fact that Troy has a great environment in which to live, a solid group of business leaders, a fine-tuned city government, and wonderful people," Musilli

J.C. Wallace, president of the Troy Development Council, said Musilli deserved to be recognized for his commitment to the long-term economic development of the Troy area.

"Ron Musilli exemplifies the qualities of an outstanding volunteer in Ohio's local economic development efforts. He has been a leader in organizing the board of the TDC, which has maintained a very focused and effective economic development program for over 25 years.

He's been instrumental in developing a strong relationship with the City of Troy and Miami County to support the economic development efforts of the community, and he has been instrumental in the TDC's outreach efforts with our largest employers," Wallace said.

Buckingham awarded

PIQUA — Elizabeth (Betsey) Buckingham, tax principal with Murray Wells Wendeln & Robinson CPAs, recently received the New York State Society of Enrolled Agent's Founders Award at the annual convention. The Founders Award was established in 1997, and is presented each year to a NYSSEA member in recognition of their significant leadership and contributions to the growth and progress of the organization.

Even though Buckingham moved to Ohio 15 years ago, she continues to participate actively in mentoring the New York Society's new leaders and board members, serving on the past president's advisory council as well as giving education presentations. She is scheduled to speak at the Western New York Chapter meeting in June

In Ohio, Buckingham is a member of the Editorial Advisory Board for the Ohio Society of CPAs' Voice magazine and has contributed articles. She also serves as Secretary to the Ohio-IRS Liaison Forum and serves as secretary/treasurer of the National Association of Enrolled Agents.

Aging Americans stay home with aid of 'villages'

Weaver Shepperson has been blind for nearly 50 years. He's lived alone since his wife died in 1999 and needs transportation several times a month to visit his doctors.

Yet he doesn't plan to move out of the rowhouse in Washington's historic Capitol Hill neighborhood where he's lived since 1955.

The 80-year-old is part of a burgeoning movement among senior citizens determined to stay in their homes as long as possible. With the help of nonprofit groups known as "villages," they're enjoying many of the perks that residents of retirement or assisted-living communities receive, at a fraction of the cost.

Shepperson pays $530 annually for membership in Capitol Hill Village. It enables him to receive a change light bulbs, mainride to the doctor's office from the village's network of volunteers. The village also takes care of his grocery shopping. Without it, he says he might have had to move into assisted living.

"After the village became available, I stopped thinking about what my other alternatives would be," he said.

Scharlach and other experts note that as baby boomers age, the demand for traditional services for the elderly will only increase, making villages a more attractive option. Maureen Cavaiola, the executive director of At Home Chesapeake, a village in Severna Park, Md., said the village model appeals to independentminded boomers who don't want to think of themselves as old.
